Foreword

Alcoholism is something that can't be formed in easy terms.

Alcoholism as a whole refers to the circumstance whereby there's an obsession in man to keep ingesting beverages with alcohol content which is injurious to health. The circumstance of alcoholism doesn't let the person addicted have any command over ingestion despite being cognizant of the damaging consequences ensuing from it.

Even if the individual who's an alcoholic faces social ridicule, family insistency, abuses, insults, and so forth he's in a condition whereby he can't dispense with the habit or compulsion which is beyond his command. His senses are entirely under the influence of alcohol and any sort of an attempt put forth by him to abandon the habit doesn't work.

He's therefore entirely dependant on the beverage.

An alcohol-dependent person has such a hunger to drink that even if he happens to get into alcohol related hassles like drunk driving, losing his occupation, and so forth it doesn't stop him from not abandoning the habit.

Not everybody who ingests alcohol is an alcoholic. An individual who consumes alcohol in restricted quantities and is able to say no when he doesn't wish to drink isn't termed an alcoholic. He or she is merely a social drinker.

Chapter 1:

Understanding Alcohol Dependence

Synopsis

Alcohol dependency may be specified as a condition wherein the individual who's dependent demonstrates particular other characteristics aside from those of alcohol abuse.

Understanding Is The First Step

The characteristics of alcohol dependency include beginning to drink only one specific brand of beverage, attempting to go to places where drinks are available, seeking the company of individuals who are drinkers, incessant increase in alcohol tolerance level which means necessitating more and more drinks in order to accomplish that state of drunkenness, undergoing noticeable withdrawal symptoms at the physical level after a particular time period without drinks, boozing again to put an end to withdrawal symptoms, not being able to remain away from drinks even after repeatedly attempting to give it up, and so forth.

It's easier to treat or assist individuals who are just alcohol abusers in direct contrast to those who are alcohol dependent. Alcohol abusers may occasionally be handled even by counseling and schooling them on the perils of drinking. Alcohol dependents must accept help from the treatment clinics where they experience detoxification, medical treatment, steady counseling, and so forth.

According to men of science, the circumstance of alcohol dependence may arise due to complex genetic abnormalities or due to environmental components which include influence of loved ones or friends.

Symptoms

You are able to make out an individual who has been boozing severely with assorted symptoms he presents. These symptoms increase over a time period. Early signs if left unattended might lead to alcohol abuse and finally to alcohol dependence. Inebriation is the state an individual arrives at when he's inebriated. Drunkenness is accomplished by ingesting alcohol to the extent that it impairs the physical and mental faculties of an individual.

Symptoms early on include instability in the gait, hapless or no coordination, slurring of speech, reddening of the eyes, red look on the face, frequent hiccoughs, becoming incognizant of surroundings and consequently uninhibited and behavior which isn't characteristic of the individual. This successively brings on a lot of stress for the loved ones and friends of the individual concerned.

The individual who's intoxicated likewise exhibits swaying emotions. While he's furious one moment he becomes sad and brooding the next. Depression sways to euphoria in a brief span of time. He's depressed and pondering one moment and jolly, high-spirited and light hearted the next.

Hangover the following day is a different condition whereby the drinker might suffer from piercing headaches, nausea, vomiting and is really uncomfortable. In order to cut through these symptoms, a few drinkers take another drink early in the morning time.

Drunkenness or inebriation isn't a disease but merely a temporary state resulting from unreasonable alcohol consumption.

Being truthful is the first requirement for diagnosing alcohol related issues if any. The drinker must be honest in his answers when he's being queried about his feelings, pattern of drinking, thought process, and so forth.

This is really crucial as the first thing any drinker will tend to do is to deny any sort of an issue. They tend to put in every effort to convince the individual who's questioning them that they don't have any issue which requires treatment. All drinkers protest treatment.

According to psychiatrists, genes play a crucial role in the development of alcoholism. Particular body and brain actions and the way they interact with one another and with the individuals experiences in life influence his vulnerability toward this habit or shelter from it. Particular genes related to alcoholism have likewise been discovered.

Copious research has demonstrated that a variation of the dopamine receptor genes in mortals produces a tendency toward opiates and endorphin releasing drugs and alcohol.

Gamma-aminobutyric acid or GABA is a different repressive neurotransmitter in the brain stated to be associated with alcoholism. Studies have demonstrated that a particular enzyme called glutamate decarboxylase or GAD plays a major part as a synthesizer of this GABA. GABA plays the role of cutting down the excitement stimulating neuro activities in the brain thereby presenting a stable and calm feeling. Alcohol intake has demonstrated to increase the level of GABA allowing for a calm and numb feeling to the drinker. As one begins ingesting alcohol more and more, the counter mechanism that kicks in reduces the GABA output thereby pushing the drinker to step-up his alcohol intake. According to researchers, genetic background plays a major function in inciting an individual toward alcoholism. This occurs when there's a production of physical and psychological memories in an individual creating a hunger for alcohol in the body.

Naltrexone acts upon that part of the brain which is tangled in getting the individual addicted to drugs and toxins. This drug must be taken for a period of 7 to 10 days. After copious experimentation, it was resolved that the drug ondansetron was really effective in treating the condition of alcoholism as the addicts who were placed on ondansetron were able to cut back their consumption to about one and a half drinks.
