Spoof Emails Don't Get Taken To The Cleaners!

Volume 1

You may distribute this e-book freely, sell it, or include it as part of a package as long as it is left completely intact and unchanged and delivered via this PDF file.

 $S_{\text{poof emails}}$  - (fake emails) nowadays are a really big problem with anybody with an email account!

Nobody is safe from the nasty cheaters and thief's out there. It is spam email in the worst way out to get you and take your personal information and steal you blind.

But with the knowledge from this book you can defend yourself and not get taken.

I want to show you what kind of spoof emails to look for and also give you information on eBay, PayPal and what they say to do about these emails. By the way eBay and PayPal are the most common ones you will receive even if you don't have accounts with them.

PayPal is a merchant account own by eBay which is an online auction site. Most buyers use PayPal for payment on eBay. Which is secured for payment and faster.

Others I have seen are with credit and bank accounts.

So let's get started with the definition and procedures you get from ebay and PayPal.

Then we will get into the email themselves and come back to these first few pages to carry out the procedures.

What is spam?

Spam is unsolicited email advertising goods and services to someone with whom no previous relationship has been established. Spam includes all commercial email, unsolicited bulk email, mass email, and junk email.

What should I do if I receive a fake email?

If you think you have received a fraudulent email, forward the entire email to spoof@paypal.com and then delete it from your email account. If you already replied to a fake email with your personal information, please Contact Us right away. You may also want to contact your financial institution to alert them of possible suspicious activity. may also want to contact your financial institution to alert them of possible suspicious activity.

How can I tell the difference between a real PayPal email and a fake one?

PayPal emails will address you by first name, last name, or business name, and NOT by Dear PayPal User or Dear PayPal Member. If you are ever uncertain about the validity of the email or the email links, open a new web browser window and type in www.paypal.com. If you think you have received a fraudulent email, forward the entire email to spoof@paypal.com and then delete it from your email account.

How do I report a fake PayPal email or website?

If you think you have received a fake email pretending to be from PayPal, forward the entire email to spoof@paypal.com and then delete it from your email account. If you came across a fake PayPal website, contact our Customer Service team.

How do I report potential fraud to PayPal?

If you received what you believe is a fake PayPal email, or if you came across a spoof PayPal website, please report it to our customer service team. If possible, we request that you forward the original email you received to us at spoof@paypal.com If you have sent a payment, but have not received your item, or believe the seller to be fraudulent, complete the Buyer Complaint Process.

Email and Websites Impersonating eBay

Report Suspicious Email to eBay

If you have received an email requesting your account information and you suspect it was not sent by eBay, forward the entire message to spoof@ebay.com. To do that, follow these steps:

- In your email program, click the Forward button.
- In the "To:" field, type spoof@ebay.com
- Please do not change the subject line, add text, or forward the message as an attachment
- Click Send to send the message to eBay

Forwarding the message in this manner will allow us to review the message headers and any other information that may be attached to the email. The spoof@ebay.com email address is reserved for handling reports of attempts to impersonate eBay. In order to investigate these reports in a timely manner, we can only accept forwarded messages at this address.

If you have already submitted information after receiving an email request and you suspect that your eBay account may have been tampered with, please refer to the information on Securing Your Account and review the steps on the Protecting Your Identity page.

Take a tutorial on how to spot a spoof (fake) email.

Be sure you are on an eBay page

Before signing in, please check the Web address in your browser. If you click on a link in an email, verify that the Web address in your browser is the same as the address shown in the email. The Web address of eBay sign-in pages begins with: https://signin.ebay.com/.

Never type your eBay User ID and password into a Web page that doesn't have 'ebay.com" immediately before the first forward slash (/).

Some members have reported attempts to gain access to sensitive information through email requests that are made to appear that they were sent from eBay. These requests often include links to Web pages that will request that you sign in and submit information. At eBay, we identify these as 'spoofed' email or Web sites. If you are concerned about receiving email of this nature, please review eBay's suggestions to minimize unwanted email.

eBay will never ask you to provide credit card numbers or other sensitive information through email. If we request information from you, we will always direct you back to the eBay site. With very few exceptions, you can submit the requested information through your "My eBay" page. If you have received email requesting that you sign in or provide personal information that you suspect was not sent by eBay, please refer to the following information.

Take caution with email that includes attachments or links

eBay will not send you email that includes attachments and you will not be required to enter information on a page that cannot be accessed from the eBay site. If you receive a message that appears to have been sent from eBay that includes an attachment, do not open it.

If you are ever unsure whether or not an email was really sent from eBay , you should avoid clicking links. Instead of clicking the link, you should copy the address and paste it into the Address/Location area of your web browser. While eBay may send email that contains links, the links are provided for convenience only. You will not be required to submit sensitive information if a direct link is provided to an eBay page.

Beware of fake Web sites pretending to be eBay

Only enter your eBay password on pages where the Web address (URL) begins with https://signin.ebay.com/. Even if the Web address contains the word "eBay", it may not be an eBay Web page.

These fake Web sites (also called "spoof" Web sites) try to imitate eBay in order to obtain your eBay password and access to your account.

Before signing in, please check the Web address in your browser. The Web address of all genuine eBay sign-in pages will begin with https://signin.ebay.com/. Never type your eBay User ID and password on a page that doesn't have "ebay.com" immediately before the first forward slash (/).

International eBay Web sites will have slightly different sign-in addresses. They will include the letters that designate the site the address is associated with (for example, https://signin.ebay.fr for France , https://signin.ebay.de for Germany , etc.), followed by a forward slash (/). A complete list of sign-in pages for International eBay Web sites is given below: (Note I have taken the forward slashes off to deaden links)

Minimizing Unwanted Email

At Bay, we are concerned about your privacy. As outlined in our Privacy Policy, we do not sell or disclose your information for marketing purposes. Email addresses are only disclosed to members involved in an eBay transaction. Although members may contact one another through the Contact an eBay Member feature, this feature should only be used to facilitate a transaction. eBay will investigate and take action on reports of misuse of Contact an eBay Member.

In addition to the efforts taken by eBay to protect your privacy, there are several steps you can take to minimize the unwanted email you receive. If you are receiving unwanted email, please consider the suggestions provided below.

Choose a Unique User ID

Your User ID is the nickname that identifies you on eBay. Choosing a User ID that is not related to your email address will help prevent individuals who send unsolicited commercial email (spam) from collecting your email address. This will also minimize unwelcome email from other eBay members. If your User ID is the same or similar to your email address, you may want to change your User ID.

Please be aware that eBay users will still be able to contact you through our Email Forwarding System (EFS). This system can be accessed by clicking on the User ID of the user you would like to contact. eBay will investigate any misuse of Contact an eBay Member.

Adjust Your Notification Preferences

You can decide which email messages you will receive from eBay by changing your notification preferences. To change your notification preferences, go to your My eBay page, click the Preferences tab, and select Change My Notification Preferences under the Personal Information section. After changing your notification preferences, if you are still receiving email from eBay that you do not feel you should be receiving, please refer to the information on the Notification Preferences Overview.

Use Filters

Most email programs allow you to block email messages that contain certain words or are sent from addresses that you specify. For more information about how to set filters, consult your email program's help files or contact your email provider. When you set up email filters, make sure that those filters do not block any important messages that you may need to receive from eBay.

You can also report the unwanted email to the sender's Internet service provider (ISP) or email provider. If the email is deemed inappropriate, the ISP/email provider has jurisdiction to take action.

Change Your Email Address

One way to prevent unwanted email is by selecting a new email address to use with your eBay account. Most Internet service providers allow users to register multiple email addresses. There are also a number of services that offer free email accounts. After you have opened a new email address, you can change the email address on your eBay account. Once you have changed your email address, any email you receive from eBay will be directed to that address.

Keep in mind that there are several ways that individuals can obtain your email address, including message boards, chat rooms, and email messages sent by friends or relatives to multiple email addresses (for example, forwarded jokes or news articles). In order to prevent the receipt of unwanted email in your eBay account, you may want to register an email address that you use only for buying and selling on eBay.

*** Protect your eBay Password and Your Personal Information ***

eBay treats your personal information with the utmost care, and our Privacy Policy is designed to protect you and your information. eBay will not request personal information (password, credit card numbers, pin numbers, passwords, or Social Security numbers) in an email or in most cases, our surveys.

However, there are rare exceptions when eBay performs usability surveys that measure participants' actual use of eBay. In these exceptional cases, personal information is sometimes needed, and participants are told explicitly in advance what will be required. Additionally, participants are given contact information in order to validate that the survey is indeed from eBay.

"Spyware and Adware Problems With Your Computer"

Now I would like to make you aware of a very serious problem and that is Spyware and Adware on your computer.

As if spam, viruses, and worms aren't bad enough. Adware and spyware are here to sap the remaining life out of your productivity and privacy.

What is Spyware and Adware you ask?

Adware is software that displays advertisements on your computer. These are ads that inexplicably pop up on your display screen, even if you're not browsing the Internet. Some companies provide "free" software in exchange for advertising on your display. It's how they make their money.

Spyware is software that sends your personal information to a third party without your permission or knowledge. This can include information about Web sites you visit or something more sensitive like your user name and password. Unscrupulous companies often use this data to send you unsolicited targeted advertisements.

Is Your PC Affected by Spyware?

The main problem that most people notice with either kind of program is that they cause performance issues with their computers. For example, Internet Explorer might not work properly any more, your computer might hang more frequently, or your computer might slow down significantly. Removing spyware successfully is difficult enough to make preventing it in the first place a priority.

Unauthorized adware and spyware usually install on your computer covertly by using one of two methods:

• Tricking you into clicking a link that installs it. Links to spyware can be deceptive. For example, a Web site that's trying to push spyware onto your computer might open a window that looks like a Windows dialog box, and then trick you by installing when you click a Cancel button to close the dialog box.

Sometimes, spyware pushers will put a fake title bar in an empty window, and then install spyware when you try closing the window.

• Installing freeware that includes it. For example, you might install a free file-sharing program that surreptitiously installs spyware on your computer. File-sharing programs can be a major conveyor of adware.

Once installed, spyware can transmit your personal information and download advertisements 24 hours a day. It can also hijack your browser settings, such as your home page or search page.

Protect against Spyware and Adware

Without help, you have no way to prevent adware or spyware. Old antivirus programs don't even prevent adware, since they didn't consider them viruses or worms. First, you usually give permission to install adware, although you do so unwittingly because adware and spyware pushers are deceptive.

Second, adware doesn't behave like a typical virus or worm. They don't usually do actual damage to your computer, other than wrecking its performance, and they don't spread themselves using your address book. (Although some kinds of adware can break your anti-spyware tools.)

Check Your Computer

If you're even thinking about scanning your computer for adware and spyware, then you're probably experiencing some of the symptoms I described earlier in this article. Those include instability, performance problems, or possibly a hijacked Web browser. Expert Zone Columnist Jerry Honeycutt is a writer, speaker, and technologist who has written over 25 books, including Microsoft Windows XP Registry Guide (Microsoft Press, 2002). He frequently writes about customizing and deploying Windows XP.
